Preface

The Analysis of Election 2008 Manifestoes of major Political Parties of Pakistan is an attempt to showcase the pledges, promises and policies of the political parties on issues that they feel are important for the Pakistani electorate. The 2008 Election takes place in the backdrop of a dense political, constitutional and security environment with the electorate complaining of ever-increasing inflation and high cost of living. The issues such as the role of the military in politics, independence of the judiciary and the reinstatement of deposed Judges, insurgency in tribal areas, centre-provinces relations, economic uplift of the people, etc., all make part of news headlines in the period preceding election. This study analyses how the leading political parties of Pakistan that are supposed to have their hands on the pulse of the people, respond to these issues and what policies do they propose for addressing these issues.

Another objective of the Analysis of the Manifestoes of political parties is to facilitate the voter to base his or her decision to vote for a political party on the basis of the party's position on issues. Year 2007 has witnessed an awakening in the society on issues such as the supremacy of the rule of law. Results of various public opinion polls indicate that there is near consensus in the society on some of the key issues relating to the overall debate of the rule of law, democracy and the role of the military in politics. How this trend manifests itself in people's choice in political parties remains to be seen. This study, however, is an attempt to assist the voters in comparative analysis of party's positions on key issues before they choose their candidates.

This study may also be useful to the political parties in comparing their manifestoes with the other parties. Political researchers, analysts and Media both in Pakistan and outside may also find this comparison useful in their professional work.

The present study is second in the series of the comparative analysis of political parties' manifestoes carried out by PILDAT. The first such study was conducted and disseminated before the October 2002 election to fill the information gap and enable the people to make right political decisions on the basis.

Executive Summary

The Analysis of the Election 2008 Manifestoes of Major Political Parties of Pakistan is an attempt by PILDAT to highlight, for the benefit of the Pakistani electorate, how each of the major political parties plans to address key national issues confronting Pakistani state and society today. The comparative analysis of election manifestos of major political parties aims to provide a tool whereby the general public becomes more aware of the alternative choices available to them in the form of different political parties.

The paper analyses the manifestoes of major political parties that have been unveiled ahead of Election 2008. The paper covers the manifestoes of the Awami National Party (ANP), Muttahida Majlis-e-Amal (MMA), Muttahidda Quami Movement (MQM), Pakistan Muslim League (PML), Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz (PML-N) and Pakistan Peoples Party (PPP). Instead of analysing the manifesto of each political party separately, the paper analyses the position of each of the parties included in the study on a list of issues including Economic Issues, Political Issues, Social Issues and Nuclear Policy and Foreign Relations. The list of issues analysed in the study has been either derived from the result of various recent public opinion polls in which people have ordered issues of importance or PILDAT has picked them as issues that dominate the 2008 Election debate.

For the purpose of analysis, parties' positions have been defined as General, Detailed, Extensive or No Stance. The analysis of the manifestoes reveals that on most issues, the Pakistan Peoples Party and the Pakistan Muslim League-Nawaz have outlined detailed or extensive policies. Some other parties analysed such as the PML and the MQM have also presented detailed positions on some issues but in comparison to the PPP and PML-N who have had experience in running the governments at the centre and in the provinces, the positions of other political parties lack comprehensive treatment.

A common feature of the manifestoes is the generality or vagueness of their positions on a number of issues. At times, the articulation of the positions amounts to non-statements. Despite this common flaw, some parties have taken specific positions on some issues and that makes the public accountability of the party easy once it comes into power and serves for a term.

Apart from parties' positions on each issue tabulated in the study, the Party Position Chart in the beginning of the study outlines whether a party has taken a position on the issue and the extent of the policies of each party contained in their manifestoes on the categorisation of General, Detailed and Extensive.

On the broader cluster of Economic Issues including Unemployment, Poverty Alleviation, Agricultural Development and Water Resources and Energy, the PML-N and the PPP have presented detailed policies followed by the PML and the MQM. The ANP, mostly focussing on economic issues faced by the NWFP has taken a detailed position only on the Agricultural Development and Water Resources stressing its position against the construction of new water reservoirs. On the critical issue of Energy crisis in the country, both MQM and the PML have outlined no position in their manifestoes while only the PPP has discussed the subject in detail with all remaining parties with a general mention of their position on the issue. The most striking and bold aspect of the PPP's economic manifesto is the commitment to provide guaranteed employment for at least 1 year.

In the section containing Political Issues including Independence of the Judiciary, Civil-Military Relations, Sovereignty of the Parliament, Provincial Autonomy, Devolution and the Local Government System, Status of FATA, Policy to Counter Terrorism, Independence of the Media and Corruption and Accountability, it is the PML-N and the PPP that have made extensive pledges. The PML-N is the only political party that has devoted a chapter in its manifesto to the Independence of the Judiciary and the Civil-Military Relations, taking a clear position on the reinstatement of the deposed judges. The PML and the MQM, both allies of the Musharraf regime, have taken no position on the question of civil-military relations or on the role of military in politics or the independence of the judiciary. The PPP is conspicuous by taking a very brief, general and almost vague position on the Independence of Judiciary and by taking no position at all on the reinstatement of the judges deposed unconstitutionally on November 3, 2007. Both PPP and the PML-N have outlined extensive positions on the sovereignty of the Parliament outlining key reform to strengthen the institution of Parliament.

On the issues of Education, Health, Labour, Rights of Women, Non-Muslims, Youth and Environment, the parties' positions follow the same pattern. Despite Youth constituting a large chunk of the population and notwithstanding youth's role in the overall electorate today and in the days to come, most political parties including the PPP, the ANP, the MMA and the MQM do not mention Youth in their manifestoes with only the PML and the PML-N outlining detailed positions on the subject. The issue of Health, Women Development, Rights of Non-Muslim Communities and Environment too do not receive adequate levels of attention by the political parties whose manifestoes have been covered in the study. Issues of Labour, as expected, have been mentioned in the greatest detail and the most specific terms in the PPP manifesto. The PML-N, though, is the only party which has given a specific figure (Rs. 5000) for the new minimum monthly wage for labour.

On the Security Policy, especially Nuclear Policy and Pakistan's Foreign Policy with key regional and international players including India, Afghanistan, USA, European Union, China and the Muslim Countries, most parties' positions are not a departure from the existing nuclear policy of the country with all parties supporting strengthening of relations with regional and international players. The PPP wishes to place the command and control of nuclear weapons under the Defence Committee of the Cabinet headed by the Prime Minister unlike the current position where this control has been vested in the President recently. The PPP has also outlined extensive proposals to improve relations with Afghanistan while the PML-N wishes to focus on building economic ties with countries around the world.

An important issue which has not received direct or detailed attention from any political party is the fast declining business competitiveness of Pakistan in a globalised world. The vision, policy and plan to address this critical issue are missing from the party manifestoes.

Almost all parties except the former ruling party the PML have repeatedly demanded "an independent Election Commission" but surprisingly how these parties, with the small exception of the PML-N, propose to make the Election Commission independent is not touched in the manifestoes.

Agriculture in Pakistan is suffering due to shortage of irrigation water. The scarcity of water during the low-rain periods necessitates development of water reservoirs on the rivers. The current reservoirs are silting up and capacity is depleting. In addition, hydroelectric projects are essential to meet the rising needs of energy at competitive rates. Despite these pressing needs, Pakistan has been unable to build new storage dams and hydroelectric projects because the provinces could not develop consensus. Unfortunately, none of the political parties have proposed a tangible solution to this critical problem and have largely dwelled in generalities and expression of good wishes.

Purpose and Scope of the Study

The pre-election atmosphere of the 2008 General Election is different from the previous General Election held in 2002. The 2002 Election appeared devoid of typical fanfare and enthusiasm in the general masses. Owing to the absence of the leaders of the two major political parties, the PML-N and the PPP, most the electoral campaign was at the constituency and not at the national level. This General Election not only seen the heads of the major parties back and in action on the campaign trail, the significant difference is the levels of awareness in the society on key political issues such as the rule of law, independence of judiciary, the continued role of the military in politics. Thanks to the mushrooming of independent electronic news media (although it is placed under significant curbs in the pre-electoral phase beginning November 03, 2007), the lawyers and civil society movements on the rule of law and the reinstatement of deposed judges, successive public opinion polls point towards the new trend of increased public awareness and expression to this awareness in the people.

But at the key policy level, can the people differentiate between what various political parties promise to deliver? How do political parties plan to tackle the issues of unemployment, inflation, poverty, extremism and the country's relations with the regional and international players? How do political parties pledge to resolve the crucial question of provincial autonomy and equitable rights of the provinces under the federation of Pakistan? How do they plan to address the insurgency in FATA and stop extremism from finding human ammunition and foot soldiers from the soil of Pakistan?

The analysis of the election manifestoes of major political parties is an attempt by PILDAT to provide some of these answers to the people by highlighting how each of the major political parties plans to address key national issues. The comparative analysis of election manifestos of major political parties simply aims to provide a tool whereby the general public becomes more aware of the alternative choices available to them in the form of different political parties. It is because of this reason that the study does not attempt to carry out a detailed analysis of the manifestos of each and every political party. Recognizing that a study of manifestos of all political parties and electoral alliances allowed to contest the forthcoming election would have rather complicated this study hurting the very aim of simplifying the choices for our readers, PILDAT's team of analysts selected a total of five (5) political parties and one (1) political alliance to comparatively analyse their manifestoes.

The selection of issues analysed in the study stems from a variety of sources including various public opinion polls conducted recently in which people picked bread and butter issues such as unemployment and inflation, etc., as issues most important to them in determining which party they vote for. The selection of political and social issues is derived from news analysis and inferred from the very manifestoes of political parties.

Election 2008 - Major Issues

Regardless of the limelight received by political issues prior to Election 2008, most public opinion polls show that “bread and butter issues remain the top concern in the minds of Pakistani voters.”¹ Nearly 80 per cent of the people choose an economy-related issue as the most important in determining which party they would vote for. The order of issues analysed in this paper, therefore, puts the economic issues on top followed by other key issues such as the political issues, foreign relations, social issues, etc., that dominate the 2008 Election debate.

Party-wise Position on Important Issues

Economic Issues

Rising inflation, cost of living and increasing unemployment contribute to the major concerns of the voters. In their Election 2008 manifestoes, political parties have focused on the economic issues. The issues clubbed-together under the economic issues include Unemployment, Poverty Alleviation, Agricultural Development and Water Resources and Energy.

Unemployment

In the 2008 electoral campaign, how do the major Political Parties pledge to tackle the issue of unemployment in the country? The following table outlines the key proposals and promises of the political parties on their strategies to manage unemployment:

UNEMPLOYMENT

Party	Proposed Programme
ANP	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - ANP aims to formulate its projects and programmes keeping in view yearly employment targets and the need to create more opportunities - ANP employment policies in addition to its educational reforms seek to contribute in development of skills and vocational expertise at the basic level - To give special attention to the problem of educated and unemployed members of the labour force and to assist in their suitable job placement, internships, placement bureaus and advisory organizations etc. to be created by ANP - ANP seeks to encourage self-employment projects

MQM	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Encouragement of industrialisation, promotion of Cottage industries, establishment of vocational institutions and incentives for agro-based industries in rural areas to control unemployment - Other State interventions, i.e. distribution of land to landless Haris / Muzarehs, (tillers), improved system of Zakat and social insurance besides indigenous philanthropy to go a long way to achieve the desired results

Party	Proposed Programme
	intensive activities. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - A National Employment Fund to be created to assist qualified and skilled youth to set up their own business or professional practice. Self employment on individual or cooperative basis will be given maximum support - A National Education Corps to be recruited from among the educated unemployed to spread literacy in the country - Employment opportunities for qualified doctors to be provided by constructing more hospitals; extending soft term, easy instalment loans on personal surety to doctors including tax concessions for establishment and expansion of private hospitals - Programme for the full absorption of engineers, scientist and other skilled manpower, including a new National Consultancy Policy for the use of national consultants - Programme for the development of technical skills to produce technically trained and employable manpower The intake of polytechnics and vocational schools to be increased through introducing double shift in existing institutions

Poverty Alleviation

With an official unemployment rate of 3.13%,² a rising cost of living and an inflation rate of 7.9%,³ the figures of a reduced poverty level from 34 %⁴ of the total population to the present 23.94%⁵ are rendered questionable when the “increasing” income levels are at least partially offset by the excessive price hikes. The masses of Pakistan continue to bemoan the struggle it takes to make their ends meet. In this context, there remains a widespread belief that the gains of the financial sector in the last few years have not trickled down to the masses and the inequality between the consumption levels of the richest and the poorest remains high at 29.5%.⁶

Under the given circumstances, the political parties provide following strategies for Poverty Alleviation:

POVERTY ALLEVIATION

Party	Proposed Programme
ANP	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - By reducing defence budget, more to be invested in social welfare of the people. 6 % of the GDP to be directed towards education and health facilities - Difference between the low and high paid government employees to be narrowed to a 1:5 ratio.
MMA	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Bringing in practice the early Islamic social welfare systems, allowances to be provided to the unemployed, handicapped, widows and senior citizens. MQM	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - A comprehensive policy outlining specific aims to curb poverty to be developed with a focus on increasing educational attainment, health facilities, fair distribution of assets and employment opportunities - Mapping of poverty will be a priority - Gap between wage increase and inflation to be narrowed. Public sector wage raises must be directly proportional to inflation - Control of food inflation by stabilising and / or subsidising the prices of Wheat, Rice, Sugar and Oil - Burden of taxes on the poor to be minimised such as reduction of taxes on utility bills - Social Security Schemes to be introduced and enforced to cover all adult population
PML	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - To establish a state supported Skills Promotion Trust to generate easily available small loans for persons desirous of transforming their skills for generating incomes on self help basis. - To launch a Village Development Initiative for integrated development of rural communities - To prepare a “revolutionary programme” for low cost housing to those who cannot afford it - Existing orphanages to be provided with funding to upgrade their facilities

Agricultural Development and Water Resources

Being an agrarian economy, the focus of development in Pakistan stays on agricultural development and on judicious management of water resources. Development of Water Resources has become an emotive subject and the country faces severe water shortages for agriculture. The position of major parties on how to address the growth in agriculture and manage the contentious issue of water resources and reservoirs is as follows:

Party	Proposed Programme
ANP	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Considering the importance of agriculture in the provincial and national GDP, ANP to accord special priority to agricultural development - Production of fruits, vegetables, flowers and oil-rich products such as olives to be encouraged so as to develop these into profit generating cash crops - ANP to take appropriate steps to support poultry farming in the province of NWFP - Efforts to be made in order to bring collection of excise duty on tobacco under the prowess of the provincial Government - To work for water irrigation projects at Federal and Provincial levels to ensure utilization of water available under Indus Water Distribution Accord (2MAF) to NWFP. - ANP to continue opposition to any projects that do not benefit the people of the NWFP province or that affecting the employment level, land belonging to people or environment of the province

Removal of restrictions on agricultural exports - Building consensus on the basis of the 1991 Water Accord on the distribution of Indus River Water to allow new water projects to be undertaken and extension of irrigation facilities to additional areas - To ensure full utilisation of available water resources by expanding the on-farm water management Programme - To initiate schemes for crop insurance through private insurance companies to protect the farmer against the vagaries of weather - To encourage ecologically sound development policies to preserve and develop the country's natural and forest resources to counteract the impact of global warming - To provide incentives for farmers to adopt social forestry on a commercial scale rather than depend on restrictive laws for this purpose particularly in border areas - To expand the programme to fight the cancer of water-logging and salinity - A major programme of aquifer recharge in arid and semi arid areas of Cholistan, Thar and Balochistan to ensure that water flow from tube wells installed in these areas can be sustained - Immediate updating of the revenue and property records using Information Technology to be undertaken. Based on the information so generated 'benamis' can be done away with property rights of female members protected and access to credit by the poor assured - Policy shift in agriculture from commodity based agriculture to product based agriculture. As an example 22 products can be produced from corn. - All agricultural research organizations to be completely revamped to ensure that the benefits of research actually reach the farmers. - Agricultural education in general and curriculum of agriculture universities in particular to be modernized - Mafias and monopolies in case of major agriculture products to be done away with by putting in place appropriate agricultural marketing strategies

Party	Proposed Programme
	<ul style="list-style-type: none">- Surplus electric power to be provided for tube-wells free of cost- To put in place a bold and comprehensive programme to ensure water security for future generations. Key elements of the strategy would consist of: water conservation, additional storages, farmer-managed irrigation systems, rehabilitation of the ageing canal and barrage system, an effective drainage system, enhancing water Productivity, strengthening water rights and protecting the lower delta eco-systems

Energy

Pakistan faces a major energy crisis in natural gas, oil and electric power that has the potential to choke the economic growth for many years to come. Not only that, the impact of the energy crisis on the average citizen has been deeply felt in the election year itself. How do the political parties plan to manage the energy crisis, the following table unfolds:

ENERGY

Party	Proposed Programme
ANP	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - To work towards making electricity a provincial subject, as structured before the introduction of one-unit government in the country - To reduce dependence on WAPDA, which sells electricity at a price much above the production costs which reduces NWFP's comparative advantage in electricity production - To encourage investment in small-scale electricity-generating projects
MMA	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Special importance to be accorded to nuclear and solar energy projects. - To make efforts to increase oil production and to reduce oil, electricity and gas prices on an immediate basis - To rid the masses of the Load Shedding predicament - To control power theft and waste
MQM	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Recurring power load shedding to industrial units would be addressed
PML	No specific reference is made to the subject in the manifesto
PML-N	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - To provide the full energy needs of an expanding industrial sector through maximum exploitation of domestic sources of energy namely coal, gas and hydro to reduce the country's dependence on imported energy. - To ensure conservation of energy and a more efficient use of the same.
PPP	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Committed to establishing a comprehensive and credible programme ensuring Energy Security and Adequacy of Supply - To ensure maximum use of indigenous water and hydrocarbon resources, energy conservation, proper pricing and use to protect consumers. - To encourage private sector investment in the energy sector and fast tracking of exploration and development of indigenous hydro carbon resources. - To accelerate development of alternative energy including wind and solar energy and to revive the Ketī Bunder project, establishing an energy corridor from Central Asia to Balochistan.

Political Issues

The 2008 Election faces many a politically volatile issues. Where on the one hand, political parties are split on the question of whether to boycott or not to boycott the election before the establishment of the rule of law and the reinstatement of deposed judges of the apex court, the country also witnesses unprecedented levels of polarization between the civil and the military. Media remains the most respected institution with nearly 80 per cent popularity and media independence a huge electoral issue with most news media under curbs. Terrorism, the status of Federally-Administered Tribal Areas (FATA), provincial autonomy, all occupy the central plank of political and security-related discourse in Pakistan. How do the major political parties respond to these challenges, the following tables identify:

Independence of the Judiciary

On November 3, 2007, the Chief of Army Staff Gen. Pervez Musharraf suspended the Constitution of Pakistan with the key target to purge the Judiciary, which had begun to assert its independence. Unlawful removal of such a large number (around 60) of senior judges of the Supreme Court and the High Courts has become one of the most important issues of the political discourse surrounding the 2008 Election. Whereas all parties talked of boycotting the January 2008 Election initially until the judiciary was restored, major political parties have opted to participate in the election while some national and provincial parties have chosen to boycott the election on this issue. The table highlights the parties' position on this crucial issue of Independence of Judiciary:

Civil Military Relations

At this juncture, the Civil-Military Relations are at their most strained, suffering from deep polarisation. The political parties, and the civil society have begun to loudly question the role of the military in politics and in key areas of policy formulation in Pakistan. In fact, the military's political role and its repeated interventions are considered the major stumbling block in Pakistan's transition towards a sustainable democracy in the country. Given the centrality of the civil-military relations to the overall question of governance and democracy in the country, how do political parties propose to deal with this key issue through their election manifestoes? The table below highlights the stance of the parties:

Sovereignty of the Parliament

In a democracy, Parliament remains the key institution with the authority to legislate, represent the people of the country and to oversee the executive. Due to repeated interventions in democracy, Parliament as an institution has not been allowed to strengthen. Key policy decisions have been made outside the Parliament without a meaningful consultation with the public representatives. For a strong democracy, it is necessary that Parliament remains a sovereign and supreme institution. The position of each of the key parties reviewed in this study is enclosed in the table:

Provincial Autonomy

The federation of Pakistan is facing strains in the realm of centre-provinces relations. Mostly economic in nature, the issues in centre-provinces relations include disagreement over equitable share of resources as well as provinces' powers in the management and administration especially after the introduction of the local government system. The following table carries the position of major political parties on how do they wish to tackle the issues in the Provincial Autonomy:

Devolution and the Local Government System

The current Local Government System was installed in the country on August 14, 2001 through a Devolution Plan. The devolution plan has been a bone of contention in the overall realm of centre-provinces relations but has also been considered an important element of governance in the country. How do the political parties view the devolution and what promises do they make about it:

Status of FATA

The status of Federally Administered Tribal Areas (FATA) and the inability of the Government of Pakistan to mainstream the population of these areas with the rest of the country has been a major issue of concern. The question of the status of FATA has especially gained currency after Pakistan joined the US in what the United States terms as its war against terrorism. The military operation against suspected militant hideouts in these areas as well as the dismal state of development in FATA form part of the overall issues of FATA. The stances of major political parties are listed below:

Policy to Counter Terrorism

Pakistan is a part of what the US terms as 'the war against terrorism'. This partnership with the West especially the US is not popular among the masses and this situation has created severe strains in the Pakistani Society. In addition, despite heavy price paid by the armed forces of Pakistan and creating dissent within the country, Pakistan is constantly pressurised to 'do more' in the war. The following table tries to illustrate how do political parties plan to counter the spread of terrorism and promote peace and harmony in the society:

Party	Proposed Programme
ANP	- The short term policy of the ANP to address the issue of terrorism in NWFP is through dialogue with people and the long term policy to ascertain the root causes of the problem

Independence of the Media

As an institution, the independent News Media has gained tremendous popularity in the public. In fact, the few recent public opinion polls indicate that media tops the public approval ratings (78 per cent of public approval⁷) in a list of institutions including the Judiciary, the Armed Forces and the Parliament, etc. Through the promulgation of Martial Law by the Chief of Army Staff on November 3, 2007, media freedom has been curtailed and all independent news channels remained off air. Till the writing of this report, the curbs on the independent news media remain and one of the most popular news channels, Geo TV, has not been allowed to transmit into Pakistan. Media freedom is one of the key ingredients of a democracy. How do political parties pledge to ensure media freedom in the future, the table below reveals:

INDEPENDENCE OF THE MEDIA

Party	Proposed Programme
ANP	- Freedom of media to be ensured
MMA	- Media to be given freedom - The Media to be stopped from airing immoral programmes

Corruption and Accountability

Corruption and Accountability remains a serious challenge in Pakistan. In the Transparency International Corruption Perception Index 2007, Pakistan stands at the score of 2.4 while scores below 5 in the index indicate that the country face serious perceived levels of domestic corruption. These communities believe that their rights, as equal citizens of the country, should be provided, respected and protected. Environmental Issues

Environmental issues figure prominently in the overall governance framework. Environment not only affects productivity, availability of natural resources, but also has an effect on health expenditures, reduced labour productivity, and other areas. Population growth and poor water infrastructure have reduced per capita water availability from 53,000 cubic meters to 1,200 cubic meters, and heavy reliance on firewood has contributed to the world's second highest rate of deforestation. Poor agricultural practices have led to soil erosion, groundwater degradation, and other problems that have hindered crop output and contributed to health problems for rural communities. Solid waste burning, low-quality fuels, and the growing use of fuel-inefficient motor vehicles have contributed to air pollution which in some cities has exceeded levels deemed safe by the World Health Organization.
